BIO

Originally from Dublin, Ronan and Rob Burke grew up in countries as diverse as the United States, Australia and Sweden.

While they have collaborated on many crazy ideas since childhood, the short film JELLYBABY was their first as co-directors and proved to be a great success. Screening at over 60 film festivals world wide, JELLYBABY picked up numerous awards including Best Short at the Celtic Film and Television Festival, Best Comedy at the LA Golden Star Shorts Fest and an IFTA nomination.

In 2008 Ronan and Rob made their directorial television debut with AISLING'S DIARY, the first teen drama commissioned for RTÉ Young People's. They followed up with RUNNERS, funded by The Irish Film Board as part of their flagship short film scheme Signatures, which won Best Short Film at the 2010 Irish Film & Television Awards.

More recently Ronan and Rob have directed teen adventure mystery FREE REIN for Netflix and many cornerstone episodes of TV3's gritty drama RED ROCK for Element Pictures and Company Pictures. They also directed the second series of RTE's massive hit DAMO AND IVOR, the IFTA winning TV series THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING WHATEVER for Accomplice and RTÉ Young People's, six episodes of the BAFTA winning ROY and Season 1 of LITTLE ROY for Jam Media and CBBC. In 2014 they released their feature film debut STANDBY a romantic comedy starring Brian Gleeson (Love/Hate) and Jessica Paré (Mad Men), funded by the Irish Film Board and the Lux Film Fund and produced by John Wallace under Black Sheep Productions.
